'Where does wood come from?' Emily asked Dad.

'Trees,' he said. 'They are cut down. Then they are made into things like tables and chairs.'

'What tree made our table?'

'An oak tree,' said Dad.

After lunch, Dad put polish on his shoes. 'It keeps the leather soft,' he said.

'Where does leather come from?' Emily asked.

'It is animal skin.'

'Yuck!' she said, 'Poor animals!'

'I knew you would say that,' he said.

Emily picked up her shoes.

'These are plastic,' she said, 'Is there a plastic tree?'

'No, we make it. Plastic means you can bend it into lots of shapes.'

'A plastic tree would look funny,' Emily said.

'Draw one,' said her Dad.

Emily got her pencil. 'Where does a pencil come from?'
